

Addison Reserve and The Sanctuary Top 2009 Distinguished Club Awards

Two of America's top private clubs have reached the pinnacle of BoardRoom's Distinguished Club Awards with the designation as Emerald Clubs.

The "Distinguished Club Awards" for 2009 recognize clubs for outstanding achievements within their club organization.

ADDISON RESERVE COUNTRY CLUB of Delray Beach, FL and THE SANCTUARY GOLF CLUB of Sanibel Island, FL are recipients of the Emerald Distinguished Club Award, the highest and most difficult of the distinguished club awards to qualify for and achieve.

Only two clubs to have qualified in the first year of the awards. To achieve the coveted Emerald Club award, clubs must achieve distinguished status in 10 departmental categories.

MICHAEL MCCARTHY, Addison Country Club and KEN KOURIL, The Sanctuary Golf Club both qualify for General Manager Distinguished Awards.

Several other clubs recognized in a minimum of five categories have also received the General Manager Distinguished Awards. They are:

STEPHEN LOGUIDICE, Ibis Golf & Country Club, West Palm Beach, FL

BRENT TARTAMELLA, Westmoor Club, Nantucket, MA

JIM BUTLER, Grey Oaks County Club, North Naples FL

"IN ITS INAUGURAL SEASON BOARDROOM MAGAZINES' DISTINGUISHED CLUB AWARDS RECOGNIZED CATEGORIES HONORING DEPARTMENT HEADS, MANAGEMENT, AND THE CLUB," EXPLAINED WAYNE OSTRANDER, DIRECTOR OF THE BOARDROOM DISTINGUISHED CLUB AWARDS.

"Of the many private clubs around the world eligible for this honor, only a select few have been named as a Distinguished Club recipients for 2009.

"Our world economy and the private club industry have battled through a couple of a very turbulent years, and the recipients of this year's award should be especially proud. Not only are their programs successful, but they have done so in a challenging economic environment," he related.

"The developments at Addison by Michael McCarthy and his team to build open lines of communication have been outstanding," Ostrander added. "The club has undergone many changes. And four very creative programs were born to foster that communication so that everyone has had a voice and been a part of the process."

The "Hey, Mike" program gives club members an outlet to voice their suggestions, opinions etc. "Tea and Topics" is a formal tea party for ladies to sit down and talk with management; "Beer and Brats", is another a smaller hosted event for the members and management. And Addison's "Employee Feedback Breakfast" each month with 12 employees representing each department, allows the club another way to get important input and feedback.

"Like any strong business or company, the better informed the club members and employees the better they will support decisions," Ostrander added. "Michael McCarthy has taken this project to the next level and the amazing results with in the club prove it."

A major focus for The Sanctuary Club has been its Green Initiative, headed by Kyle Sweet.

"This club is making a very strong effort to go green," Ostrander explained. "There's been the elimination of styrofoam; the club has been outfitted with recycling bins, employees practice separation and recycling, the tennis program recycles shoes, golf tees, made out of cornstarch, are biodegradable, kitchen cooking oil is recycled, chemicals are managed and approved by the Department of the Interior, and The Sanctuary Club is a recognized Audubon International signature sanctuary. This has been an outstanding effort," Ostrander explained.

"Today more than ever, clubs need to recognize employees, departments and programs that are setting the bar and distinguishing themselves," enthused BoardRoom publisher John Fornaro. "Deserving clubs and individuals that stand out and deliver a phenomenal product to their members and guests need to be recognized and spotlighted.

"Recognizing departments heads and clubs for thinking outside the box is important, and until recently our industry there has never been opportunity to recognize them. This is the objective of BoardRoom Distinguished Club Awards.

"These are not won by a popularity contest. It's not earned because you have a $60 million dollar clubhouse; rather clubs are judged by their departments, programs and their staff...the very reason members use the facility and derive their greatest satisfaction from their private club.

"These awards will motivate your staff to be creative and improve the member experience. Clubs that innovate, that provide great member experiences impeccable services and motivated staff have fared better through this recession than others. These awards will also help the clubs differentiate themselves with other clubs and these awards are a terrific recruitment tool," Fornaro exclaimed.

Over the past four years, she has redesigned our club's newsletter (Mirador), community cable channel and website; created the kids newsletter (MiraKids) and a staff newsletter (MiraStaff)

"Meredith has taken the club's email blast program to new levels and is a tremendous team player who strives to assist each of the departments within the club. She is tremendously patient and is a perfectionist with her attention to detail. Taking the 'easy way out' is not in her vocabulary and because of her continuous focus on excellence and commitment, her work is a great source of pride for our membership and staff," Lambert exclaimed.

Spa and Fitness: Apawamis Club, Rye, New York.

Mario Guaglianone, founder/managing director, The Salus group.

"We're honored to be recognized by Boardroom Magazine's 2009 Distinguished Club Award in the Spa/Fitness category," says managing director Mario Guaglianone.

"Open for just over a year now, the Apawamis Fitness Center is a vibrant part of the club, driving more club usage by members and factoring into decisions for new members. Once just a small room for a few determined members, the fitness center at Apawamis is now part of the club's rich heritage of providing members with a warm and welcoming experience."

In response to a member survey to expand its fitness facility, The Apawamis Club, a private country club located in the suburbs of New York City, took the challenge seriously. Combining efforts with a major squash expansion, they grew from a modest workout room with a few bikes and a weight machine to a 2,800 square foot state-of-the-art fitness center with a full range of equipment, exercise classes, health and fitness seminars, personal trainers and 24x7 access.

A key to the fitness center's success has been the integration with the vast array of other offerings throughout the club. The Salus Group, specialists in country club fitness centers, hired to manage the facility, has led this effort. By coordinating with the club's golf, squash and tennis professionals, summer camp director and chef, The Salus Group has been able to develop and deliver a comprehensive wellness program to help members reach their wellness and fitness goals.
